Writes from Caserto on the 2nd inst.:

Yesterday afterneon at four P. M. our batteries opened on Capua; this morning at dawn the commander of the fortress sent out to say that he was ready to treat. The negotiations began at ten A. M. at Santa Maria, and in the avening the capitulation was signed. Thus, the bugbear which has so long excited Neapolitan imaginations, has at last disappeared.

When the approach of the Piedmontese from the North and Garibaldi's expedition across the Volturno made the main body of the Nespolitans withdraw behind the Garigliane, the preparations to reduce Capua began. Capua lies in one 5f the numerous sudden beads which the River Volturno makes in its course toward the sea. The whole towa is built on the left or south bank of the river, and resembles in shape an ivy of the river, and resembles in shape an lvy leaf, two aides of which are defended by the Volturno, while only the third, between the two river bends, opens out toward St. Tamaro, Scuta Maria, and St. Angelo. It was against this side of the river a single battalion, with two field guns, was detached from the Piedmontese force at Sessa, to pre-vent any issue on the high road from Capua to Gaeta.

The line of attack was divided between The line of attack was divided between our forces and the Piedmontese, who came under Sonner and landed at Naples. These latter consist of two brigades, both of them weak, and one of them, the Brigata Re, with two battalions at Naples. These two brigades, in all about 4,000, took the left attack, from St. Tamaro and La Foresta to Santa Maria. The Cosens Division remained in its position at Santa Maria, and was employed in the attacks on the center: while ployed in the attacks on the center, while Medici's Division, which had relieved the Piedmonters at St. Angelo, had the right attack. Gan. Della Rocca was sent from the Piedmontese headquarters to direct the whole attack, and took up his quarters in the center at Santa Maria. Each side constructed starown batteries, and manned them too, but, as we were rather short of artillery officers, some were lent to us for the bom-bardment of the Piedmontese. The points against which the batteries were erected against which the batteries were erected were, on the Piemontese side, the south-westerly angle, which lies close to the river, in the direction of La Foresta; from Santa Maria the bastion of St. Salvatore, which protects the entrance of the railway and of all the southern roads from Aversa and Santa Maria into Capua; and on the right the bastion of Santa Maddalena, which looks in the direction of St. Angle.

in the direction of St. Angele.

To reduce the first, the Piedmentese exected two batteries, one of three rifled twelve-pounders and two ten-inch mortars, at a distance of about 1,600 meters from the St. Tamare side, and another of seven rifled guns to the left, in the direction of La Foresta. Against St. Salvatore, a battery of three rifled guns and three mortars were erected to the right of the Santa Maria-road, and a battery of two mortars to the right rear of this battery. Against Santa Maddalene, finally, there was a battery of six rifled guns, to take it in its left flank, and another of thirty-two-pounders to take it in front. in the direction of St. Angele

All these batteries had been prepared without a shot being fired from any of them, until all were ready, yesterday afternoon. Thus the position of them remained unknown to the fortress up to the last moment. Partly to conceal the position of these batteries, in case of a reconnaissance in force on the part of the enemy, and partly to protect them against acoup de main, the out-posts were gradually pushed forward until those on the right were at the edge of the glacis, at not more than 480 or 500 yards from the ramparts. Little parapets were thrown up to protect them. One must allow that the Nespolitans tried their best to break through this circle, which shut them in more and more, and scargely a day passed without some demonstration or attack being under taken against our outposts, above all, against those of Medici, toward St. Angelo. Inspite of the assistance which these attacks derived from the vicinity of the fortress, they were invariably repulsed, but only with serious loss.

Yesterday afternoon, at four o'clock, the signal for opening of fire was given at last, and our batteries went merrity at it. But neither did the fortress remain idle, and for the first hour a perfect shower of missiles was sent in the direction of the batteries, which, however, caused but very small damage. The aim could be but imperfect, for the trees prevented a good view, and all was hut guesswork. It was the same on our side, only the bastfons were larger objects, and therefore more easily hit. Buring the bombardment, Victor Emmanuel arrived at St. Asgelo, and went up to the hights to have a view of the proceedings. But he very soon returned toward Sessa. Toward nightfall the fire became slack on both sides, and, with the exception of now and then a shell which you could see traversing the air, all was still. The out-posts reported, however, to have heard great noise and confusion in the town, which increased overy time a shell fell.

The plan was not to bombard indefinitely but to recommence a few hours next morn-ing, and then assault the place. And the dispositions were taken to effect this, all the troops receiving ofders to be ready to m But all these preparations became us for at dawn the message came from General du Cornet, the Swiss commander of the fortrees, that he was ready to capitulate.

The negotiations, which were carried on with Della Rocca at Santa Maria, lasted several hours. I have not yet heard the exact tenor of the capitulation, but the garrien will se primers of war and already. rison will se prisoners of war, and already the order has been sent to Naples to prepare the barracks of the Granito for them. The Cosenz Division is to occupy Capua. It was o have taken possession of the place this evening, but it was deferred till to-me morning.

November 3.—It seems that the garriso of Capua is much larger than we anticipated. They turn out to be between 2,000 and 10,000 men, among them a number of the gendarmerie, who had taken refuge there as in a safe place.

The Nazione of Fiorence states that at Capua 10,500 men and six generals have been taken prisoners, and that beside, the Pictrovitese out presenting of 200 brease. Piedmontese got possession of 290 brass guns, 160 gun-carriages, 20,000 muskets, 10,000 sahers, 80 military wagons, pomoons for a bridge 240 meters in length, 500 horses and mulete, a large quantity of stores and ammunition, and several the said articles of clothing.

Process of the War in Italy-Particulars | The Approaching Marriage of Queen of the Surveyder of Cagan-Nearly Eleven | Christian's Daughter-Appearance of the Thousand Men Taken Princers—An Im-Interesting Event.

The London Court Journal says that the approaching marriage of Queen Christina's daughter—which is to take place in a few days at Malmaison, in the vicinity of St. Cloud—is one inducement for as speedy a re-moval as possible. The deep mourning of the Empress combined with other reasons, render it advisable to withdraw from a scene render it advisable to withdraw from a scene of festivity which so nearly concerns the royalty of Spain. The young princess is considered the flower of Queen Christina's flock. She is in her twentieth year; of soft and delicate appearance, untilke the other daughters, who are dark and priquente. She has always been regarded as the pet of the family, being the youngest, and the most admired of all. There was grat goasiong going forward for some time concerning a project of marriage between the young lady and the King of Sardinia—a design which Queen Christinahad cherished for her second daughter, who married, some time since, the Prince del Drago.

Prince del Drago.

This young indy had attracted the King's attention on the occasion of his Majesty's visit to Paris, and left the place (so say his friends) most seriously smitten with her beauty. No sooner was the fact known at Turin, however, then Caron already full of Turin, however, than Cavour, already full of designs upon his master, immediately dis-patched emissaries to Paris, not to prevent patched emissaries to Paris, not to prevent the marriage—of course not—but, better rill, to provide a more suitable and more immediate match. Thus is diplomacy ever bent upon the courteous and steady adjustment, of the rights of its proteges. The Queen, however, in the consciousness of her own power of intellect, and in that of her daughter's beauty, fought manfully with both weapons for some time; and it was not till Her Majesty's Italian relatives—who even then had strong suspicion of the ultimate designs of Victor Emmanuel—recommended Her Majesty's application to the Pope upon the subject of the partial interdiction pronounced against Sardinia, that the spell was nounced against Sardinia, that the spell was At Rome, the young Princess became so much surrounded by enemies of Sardinia, so eaveloped on all sides by friends of the other party, by advice from the Cardinals and injunctions from His Holiness himself upon the subject of the danger in which she stood, that the Prince del Drago could obtain a bearing. Since that time the licert of the hearing. Since that time the heart of the king had never healed from its wound in spite of success, and victory has been induced to plead in favor of an alliance with the younger and fairer daughter of Christins; but times are altered now. What was, free years ago for most interest desired of the five years ago, the most intense desire of the mother's soul, is no longer worth a thought, and unhesitating preference has been given to the young Spanish nobleman—faithful to his religious principle, his birth-right, and his caste—over the King who has betrayed

The approbation of Rome and Vienna, of Naples and Madrid, has been earned in consequence, and the first testimonial of the feeling has been manifested in the presents which have been received from all sides which have been received from all sides—

Times writes on the 2d: I am deeply grieved to be compelled to give bad reports of the state of the British Legion, which, hitherto, from want of or-ganization and from the disgraceful conduct of some of the niembers, has made Englishmen regret that they ever came out. While there has been great inefficiency in the command, there have been great excesses committed by individuals, and I see no other termination than the entire dissolution of the whole body.

I think, in the first place, that the volum I think, in the first place, that the volunteering principle was a great mistake, as it deprived the officers of all command over their men; and, in the second place, without any men who could be properly called officers, with two or three exceptions, it was impossible to inspire men, however well-disposed, with any thing like respect or disposition to obey. As I told you in my last, the number is gradually dwindling away, Some are entering the artillery, under Colonel Dowling, and others the cavalry, under Colonel Forbes, while many are londing about the streets, a discredit to their country.

PROSPECT OF A MILL BETWEEN THE BENICL BOY AND THE STALEYBRIDGE INFANT,-The

New York Obsper has the following para-Now that the battle for the Champlonship of England has been decided in favor of the of England has been decided in favor of the Staleybridge Infant, much interest will naturally arise to learn whether the champions, respectively, of England and America, will have a meeting. Heenan, as we announced in the Clipper a few weeks since, anthorized us to state that he would fight the Infant for from $1,000 to $10,000, and that he would give the latter $1,000 to fight in this country. As a successful man, we may now look for a reply from Hurst. Whether the Infant will come here to fight is much questioned; as Champion of the English Ring he is compelled to fight all comers, but is not obliged to leave England. However, if a fair field could be guaranteed the Benicia obtiged to leave England. However, if a fair field could be guaranteed the Benicia Boy, it is highly probable that he might be induced to "beard the iten in his den' again. We shall see a short time will decide the question, and in the meantime we may look for some thing from John C. Hoenan on the subject.

A GRAND MILITARY-POLITICAL BALLET. A Naples correspondent writes as follows:
"A new ballet, entitled An Episode of the Campaign of 1859, is now being performed at the San Carlo Theater here, which, alat the San Carlo Theater here, which, although medicere in every respect, obtains the most signal success. Rapoleon III and Victor Eaumand are singust continually on the stage at the head of the heroes of Palestro and Magenta, who dance, fight, and cover themselves with glory, amid the most frantic applause of the addience. One of the acts of this ballet, which is by M. Ricci, represents the entry of the Allied Sovereigns into Milan. The fine cathedral of that city fills the back of the stage, while more in front is a triumphal arch, ornamented with three large medallions, with portraits bearing a good resemblance to the Emperor, Victor Emmanuel and Garibaldi.
